

Abstract

A browser parses an XHTML document to identify links in the document that are marked up with the `accesskey` attribute and forms an options list 5 containing the links, so that they can be selected independently of their position in the document.